Boarders at the Banks Farm.

BUT NOT THE SUMMER, AND THEY DIDN'T PAY.

Three years ago, Banks invested $2,500 in the dairy business in a town of three thousand population. He bought a small farm near the town, for $2,000 and spent the balance for twenty head of cattle at an average cost of $50 each, for wagon and harness for delivery, bottles, milk cooler, and other equipment necessary in his business.

At the close of three years he found himself in debt to about every tradesman in the town who had trusted him, and "up against it" good and rocky. He waited and waited at his lack of success, and continued over and over who had advanced or assisted him in his business.

QUESTIONS THAT PUZZLED HIM. A friend approached him one day and said, "Jim, how much does it cost you to produce a quart of milk?"

"How much does it cost you to sell a quart of milk?"

"That's a foolish question to ask,"

"How much does it cost you to keep a cow a day?"

"How can I tell?"

"What percentage of your sales do you fail to collect?"

"Say, my friend, what are you driving at?"

"Just this. You don't deserve to succeed. You haven't learned your business yet. You are a business man, you are the type of man who tears down the business of another without building one up."

"He just with yourself. Get your figure facts before you. Before you can succeed you must know all these things and you must know how to use them."

"What is a unit value?"

"A unit value is a value for a unit of work. For instance, if you have twenty cows and you have to charge all your expenses and credit all your revenues."

"For instance, your taxes are $500. Your insurance is $10. Your hay bill is $100. Your grain bill is $200. Your feed bill is $300. Your fuel bill is $400. Your labor bill is $500. Your depreciation of cattle is $240. Your depreciation of bottles and depreciation of equipment is fully $50."

"Look at that. It won't rise up later from a business abroad and look you in the face. Just off-hand, without counting tickets and bottle caps, accepted as satisfactory proof of purity of blood."

"Sec. 17. (As amended by P. L. 1909, c. 102.) There shall be appropriated annually from the state treasury a sum of money not exceeding twenty cents to each inhabitant of the state, which shall be divided among the legally incorporated agricultural societies of the state."

"Sec. 18. (As amended by P. L. 1909, c. 102.) There shall be appropriated annually from the state treasury a sum of money not exceeding twenty cents to each inhabitant of the state, which shall be divided among the legally incorporated agricultural societies of the state."

"Sec. 19. (As amended by P. L. 1909, c. 102.) There shall be appropriated annually from the state treasury a sum of money not exceeding twenty cents to each inhabitant of the state, which shall be divided among the legally incorporated agricultural societies of the state."

His One Failing

An Odd Episode in a City Belle's Summer Campaign in the Woods.

"I'll get Tinker to take you out, I guess," said old Sackett. "He's just come in."

"Is he a good, safe man?" asked Mrs. Cranby.

"Who-Tinker? Safe? Well, he's supposed to be safe—safe as they make 'em round here," responded the hotel keeper. "He's been up in the woods with a party for two weeks—got back this morning. Best guide you can get for a young fellow. Quiet, good looking, and knows his business—won't like him, Maria. He'll work around the house till another party picks him up—maybe a day or two or a week. You're lucky to get him—I can't come to him."

"The Cranbys had just come up to the String lakes, that well known chain where the lower one affords good hotel accommodations, fair general sports and poor fishing and the upper one divides into wilderness with its accompaniments, according to distance."

"It was too bad that papa had to get that disgusting telegram which called him back to nasty old Wall Street. When you make a party to your dairy business, deal as if you were dealing with a stranger. Find what your overhead expense is—what the limit is where a cow costs you twenty and you have fine looking cows; that gets you nothing—you are selling milk, not cows."

"OVERHEAD" EXPENSES OF A COW. "Why, Jim, when you pay $25 a ton for hay to feed a cow that eats two tons of hay a week, you realize that you cost your cow a dollar a week for hay. Add to that thirty-five cents a week for grain. Add and there's your overhead expense. You must know all these things and you must know how to use them."

very serious and bent to his work, sighing a little as if at some sad remembrance—"no matter," he added softly.

Ethel was now consumed with curiosity, and her eyes inquired of his as he looked up. He shook his head.

The picnic was a great success. Ruth and the Injun appeared to have formed ties of the closest interest. It subsequently turned out that these two had possessed themselves of mummy paint from the basket, the Injun's pocket being a convenient repository.

"I'm sure they put in more cake," complained Ruth, "and I told them particularly about the apples. They must have forgotten."

The Man of The Merchant

He Proved His Courage And Daring.

No sooner did the senior engineer hear the peremptory summons than he hurried from the crowded wardroom.

"Come, dear!" said the second engineer, addressing the florid paymaster. "He went as pale as death. When the deuce does Torshell eat and sleep, Naylen? He never seems to be off duty."

The surgeon twitched his spruce eyebrows.

"Oh, Mebbe, our senior engineer—our man of the merchant marine," said he in his usual blimp, exasperating tone. "He'll go the same as our engines, and stately old machine."

"Chide is really not well, then?"

"Yes," said his mother. "He's been up in the woods with a party for two weeks—got back this morning. Best guide you can get for a young fellow. done he dismissed the case for himself. "But about this breakdown—what can you do? Our best wigwags are in touch with the enemy, and here am I not working. Never a day has he been to bed, and he's got all the work. Can you do nothing with these starboard engines?"

"They are in a pretty bad fix, but I'll do my best to work them for a time at least."

The senior engineer staggered to a deep wallow of the stricken vessel as a tumultuous swell tilted her casemated broadside. He would have sprung forward and caught him under the arms. He moaned. "My knee! My knee! It's smashed."

Half an hour later he was superintending his officers and men, who, stripped of their trousers, were clearing away the wreck. Every order that issued promptly from his blanched lips went full and fair to the mark and afforded succinct knowledge and confidence to the grumpy, sweating workmen. Theirs were ungrudging obedience and exacting for each new disaster his man. Hunched shoulders, he was through physical agonies; yet, knowing that he held the lives of 700 men and that great, glorious ship in his hand, he maintained his will indomitable. Not a detail escaped his eye or slipped his brain.

Night had long since dropped. The immense boat lay lurching from side to side, plunging wildly under the tons of green sea that thudded like battering rams against her bows and fore-castle walls. The high walled swell broke roaring.

"Make for northwest trade! Regain nearest port. Much regret breakdown," had been the sorely harassed vice admiral's last message. "Torshell! Widdington! A barrel stave in shawls and many waterproofs. Was with the first and third lieutenants on the afterbridge. Wearily he turned from straining his eyes over the sea to the silent summits of rusty masts and cleared the brine of his face and bushy eyebrows with the flat of his left hand. He was cautiously making his way up the bridge when suddenly he stopped short. A quartermaster shouted, "Dye bear that, sir?"

A faint boom had rung through the stormy wind, ominous, like to a dying world's last echo.

The first drenched scattered spout of sea. "If the enemy drive down on us, we'll fight 'em!"

"Yes, by heavens! As well go down as fight 'em. If we can work ship it's the weather for us. See Torshell. I must risk the port engines."

And as Wignate carefully made his way on deck, "Firm" east southeast was the lookout's hail.

He climbed down the thirty odd feet of slippery ladder into the maze of motionless machinery. As he touched the senior engineer on the elbow he heard the faint and quivering lips.

"Can't say," was the answer. "Mebbe we will. But every man is working his best. If it's in my power the starboard mills 'll run."

"If we can't steam God help us!" ejaculated the first.

As the incessant warship thrust herself about the iron flooring beneath the worn men seaward hither and thither, throwing them off their feet. She evened herself in a broad valley of the mountains sea.

"Let her go! Let her go!"

A breaking bill of wild water was hurling itself at the quarter. The ship was hurled forward and the chains rattled through the blocks. Torshell lurched forward and then, to the sailor's relief, heeding, toppling and coughed slightly to intimate his presence. The captain looked up a frown sweeping his hard face on marking him.

"Sir," cried the engineer, "the port—"

"One moment, sir," was the short answer. "This isn't a steam bus. And Torshell, again saluting, had stepped back, his pallid face blood red and his teeth had clin

Those Crafty Misourians.

Misourians from the "Show-Me State" have added to their reputation for craftiness. They were strong for the tariff when Democrats were being elected on the primary issue. When the tariff was discussed subject, but now that the Wilson tariff has played such havoc with American industries and is directly charged with the industrial depression, loss of employment and general hard times, Misourians have quit talking tariff and the whole "houn' dog" pack has gone barking headlong after another issue. This time it is "good roads."

Few Democrats from Northwest.

The surest barometer of political sentiment in the Northwest is the cloak room talk in the House of Representatives at Washington. The house has two "cloak rooms," Democratic and Republican. It is in these rooms that the real story of the country is told. The Democrats are in the majority, but they are not the majority in the Northwest. The Republicans are the majority in the Northwest, but they are not the majority in the Northwest.

Here and There.

An administration paper which has consistently and persistently in its editorial columns reiterated that "business is good," and has never for a moment tolerated any suspicion of anything else, in its news columns begins a review of the situation with the significant statement, "Developments in the financial world to-day were of a more cheerful character."

Summary of the important news from the theater of war in Europe which gets by the censor.

Forty-five thousand Japanese troops have embarked on transports and are awaiting orders.

Several Australian warships have joined the British fleet in Asiatic waters.

Great enthusiasm for the mother country is manifested in Canada. Italy still maintains her neutrality.

It is said that, "on account of the war," the importation of Paris fashions will necessarily be stopped. So the European war is not without compensations to us.

It is complained in some quarters that the new reserve bank currency is hastily designed, and "looks cheap." But it isn't.

A correspondent of the Springfield Republican writes that paper that its editorials have been the cause of the New York papers "skinned to death." In the interest of that high literary standard of which the Republican has always been an exponent, we would suggest that the correspondent amend his expression to read "skinned a mile."

How Do You Explain It?
On account of the European war, which interferes with shipment across the water, the price of flour has gone up. On account of the war, the price of sugar has made a sharp advance. On account of the war, the price of apples is likely to be low.

Opportunity Farm at New Gloucester has begun the manufacture of a stamp bearing the name of the New York City, and pictures of various implements used in agriculture and sports in this State. The word "Maine" is stamped in gold on the green background of the stamp. Supt. Pease plans to place their distribution in the hands of a state agent and hopes to dispose of between 6000 and 7000 books a year, each book containing 100 stamps.

Bethel.

Sunday was a very hot day even among the mountains.

Monday Mrs. Houghton of Portland came to Bethel to be the guest of Mrs. O. M. Mason.

Tuesday Mrs. F. S. Chandler returned from a visit with her daughters at Yarmouth and Mrs. Arthur Shirley of Stratford, Conn., are guests of their sisters at Mrs. E. T. Russell's summer home.

Wednesday the Ladies' Club of the Congregational church held their annual summer fair and supper. Exquisite fancy work was on sale, aprons of many designs and the flower table, presided over by the younger girls, had a good sale. Miss True presided over the tea table in the parlor, which proved a very pleasant center for refreshment and sociability. The young ladies had charge of a miscellaneous table filled with fancy articles. Miss Cross' table proved attractive with its pot-pourri and pillows filled with fir and lavender. The ladies were well pleased with their success.

Mrs. S. I. French went to Mechanic Falls and her little grandson returned to his home.

Mrs. G. R. Wiley of Portland has been a guest of Bethel friends.

After a long illness, Mr. Simson Brown, passed away at the home of his son, Harry Brown, where he has been most tenderly cared for.

Harold Rich is entertaining his friends. Mr. and Mrs. Saturday, beginning Friday morning at nine o'clock, there will be a mixed foursome tournament at the golf links. The tea will be given at the club house on Saturday afternoon from four to six o'clock by Mrs. Charles L. Case.
